Changing perceptions of a local charity

Title: Cleethorpes Memorial Hall

Challenge: Cleethorpes Memorial Hall was built to commemorate the local men and women who lost their lives in the World War I and II it provides an affordable venue for use by the whole community. In the local area, however it was declining in popularity and many people viewed as a bit of a 'white elephant'

Solution: Kinetic were contacted to suggest ways of increasing bookings and raising the profile in the local area. Budgets were minimal so we undertook this work on a pro bono basis that just covered costs. One of the things that struck us in our early discussions was the fact that it was a charity, not a council building. This was a surprise to us and we thought a surprise to the locals and would cast a whole different light on this venue.

We started by creating a simple logo and then produced a number of leaflets, posters and banners that positioned the venue as a very versatile and cost effective venue for a whole host of community activities. We promoted its charitable status and also the reason why it had been built – as an affordable venue to be used by the whole community.

The Memorial Hall is now enjoying better PR exposure and links with the local tourism and is being enjoyed by the community.

“ This historic venue was being overlooked by the very people it had been built to serve – the community. People didn't realise it was a charitable organisation run by volunteers. All we did was to tell people the true story. ”
